Essential Public Health Functions

1. Fundamental and indispensable set of collective actions under the responsibility of the State to meet public health goals, including the attainment and maintenance of the highest level of population health possible within given resources.
2. The EPHFs are a list of minimum requirements that countries need to assure the effectiveness of public health in their own context.
3. Essential to health systems strengthening, which aims to reorient action to improve public health capacities
4. EPHFs are also supportive of and complementary to
 - primary health care,
 - common goods for health,
 - the International Health Regulations (IHR) (2005), and
 - disease-specific and life- course-specific programmes;

All of these together contribute to UHC, health security and other Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) beyond health.
